Germans in Maoriland?

Two programmes

(2) Classical Musicians

With around 10,000 Germans settling in New Zealand between the early 1840s and the start of World War I, Germans formed the second largest immigrant group after the British. Reading this fact can't help make us wonder whether some of these Germans might have played an important role in New Zealand's early musical history, as they did in England at the same time.

Musicologist Samantha Owens sets about investigating (RNZ)
