12:12 Spectrum: Camptown

Sixty thousand soldiers were trained at the Featherston Military Training Camp from 1916 to 1918. It was built in under a year by 1000 workers, driven by World War One's urgent need for men to fill the trenches of the Western Front. The camp was more like a small town but today a few foundations and walls are all that's left. John Hodder and Derek Hallett show Spectrum's Jack Perkins around the camp remains and recreate the life and times there (RNZ)
