Townes van Zandt was a singer-songwriter born to wealth who cared nothing for it; a man who, by outward appearances, often seemed happy but who struggled with personal demons. Yet somehow, through it all, Townes managed to write songs of lasting beauty and profound emotional power. It is a story of tragedy and artistic triumph. This documentary features rare interviews with Townes, conversations with musicians touched by his music including Joe Ely, Rodney Crowell and Delbert McClinton, candid memories from those who knew him intimately and Townes' most influential songs - including some vintage live performances (KUT)
