11:04 Rodriguez: Searching For Sugar Man

When Sixto Rodriguez emerged from Detroit in the early 70's, he made two albums that didn't catch the ears of the public in the United States. But in South Africa, Rodriguez became a household name - up there with Bob Dylan and Elvis Presley. South Africans didn't know much about his life, but it was as accepted rumour that he had committed suicide. Twenty-five years later, a couple of fans decided to search for information and they discovered their hero alive and well - doing manual labour and completely unaware of his impact and success half a world away (PRX)
