A Flickering Flame: is the Olympic Ideal Dead?

"The important thing in life is not to win but to take part, the essential thing is not to have conquered but to have fought well". So said the founder of the modern Olympic movement, Baron Pierre de Coubertin, at the end of the 19th

Century. How does his noble ideal fit with the modern phenomena of professionalism, doping, individual financial gain, nationalistic pride, huge corporate sponsorship? Is the Olympic ideal still alive? As the Rio Games approach, Owen Bennett Jones chairs a BBC World Service Newshour Extra discussion on the present and future of the Olympics. (BBCWS)
