Reformation Part 3: Africa's Children

In the third programme of a series focussing on reforming faith, Anne Soy travels to the Ghanaian capital, Accra, to meet the Mother of African Feminist Christian Theology Mercy Amba-Oduoy. Mercy is recognised as the leader of a movement that has constantly challenged the male preconception of being 'a good girl' a phrase in Africa which means not questioning the established role and place of young women. She is showing that many of the practices that have become part of life for women such as polygamy, marital rape or FGM have no theological basis. (BBC)
