Black and Proud in Brazil

For decades, Brazil has presented itself as a colour-blind nation in which most citizens are, at least to some extent, racially mixed. But a controversial education law is encouraging black Brazilians to assert their own distinct identity. Federal public universities now have to comply with government quotas for black students, as well as others deemed to be at risk of discrimination. For BBC Assignment, David Baker reports on an issue that is at the heart of what it means to be black in Brazil.

5:10 Heart and Soul
Iceland's Dark Lullabies

Storyteller Andri Magnason seeks out the darkness of the Icelandic Christmas. He used to be terrified by his grandmother's Christmas tales of Gryla the 900-year-old child-eating hag and her 13 troll sons - the Yule Lads - who would come down from the mountains looking for naughty children in the warmth of their homes. These dark lullabies partly hark back to a pre-Christian Christmas when the Norse gods dominated peoples' lives. As Iceland opens up to global influences after centuries of isolation, Andri travels from farmstead to lava field to find out how these traditions live on. (BBC)

10:12 World Book Club Robert Harris – Imperium

In the elegant surroundings of Worcester College, Oxford, the hugely popular British author Robert Harris discusses Imperium, the first of his bestselling Roman trilogy with Harriet Gilbert and an Oxford Literary Festival audience. The setting is Ancient Rome, a city teeming with ambitious and ruthless men, but none more brilliant than a rising young lawyer Marcus Cicero who decides to gamble all on one of the most dramatic courtroom battles of all time. Scrupulously researched and vividly imagined Imperium brings to life the cutthroat politics and the timeless pursuit of power as one man seeks to attain supreme authority within the state. (BBC)
