11:06 Noise: A Human History - Power and Revolt

A series of narratives from the 17th to 19th centuries which explore how struggles for power have been struggles in which sounds play their part - for both sides. We explore the state's ability to instill discipline and devotion through aural spectacles; the power of the wealthy to protect themselves from the noisy squalor of the poor; and the new art of eavesdropping that emerged in response to these changes in domestic life (4 of 6, BBC)
