5:30 Mengele's Twins

Among the horrors perpetrated at the Auschwitz camp were crude and unscientific experiments conducted on Jewish twins. They were masterminded by the notorious Josef Mengele, known as "the Angel of Death". He was a true believer in the Nazi creed about the alleged genetic shortcomings of Jews. Survivors of his brutal regime have spoken to the BBC about their experiences. They include Yona Laks who was deported to Auschwitz with her twin sister from the Lodz ghetto in Poland at the age of 14, and Vera Kriegel who arrived at the camp when aged just six. (BBCWS)

7:06 Fridgeonomics

When you are poor and you get a little richer, one of the first things many do is to buy a fridge. In India for example, fridges are the second most desired object after a television. Two thirds of the population are yet to own one, but that number is falling. What you put in that fridge reveals a lot about changing wealth, consumption and lifestyles. The BBC World Have Your Say programme travels to India and examines the changing consumption patterns by taking a look at the contents of fridges belonging to members of its audience. (BBCWS)

11:06 The Subcontinental: Bollywood

Every Bollywood movie has songs - it's basically the pop music of India. And Bollywood wouldn't be Bollywood without all those songs. The Bollywood tradition is relatively recent, but it comes from deep cultural roots: the song and dance that have permeated the culture of the Indian Subcontinent for hundreds of years. And yet, Bollywood composers also shamelessly copy from all musical styles. So it's kind of like a mix of music styles from around the world - the most global music there is. And best of all, it's infectious, it's festive, and, well, it just makes the world a better, happier place. This documentary takes you on a journey through the history of Bollywood music featuring classic songs and recent hits along with interviews with comedian Russell Peters, filmmaker Deepa Mehta (Water, Bollywood/Hollywood), Bollywood choreographer and dance sensation Shiamak Davar, and Ameen Merchant, author of The Silent Raga, among others. (Part 1 of 2, CBC)
