Morocco's Jews: Hospitality or Hostility?

Morocco's Jewish community was once the biggest in the Muslim world. More than a quarter of a million Jews called the North African country home. Most Moroccan Jews left after the establishment of Israel in 1940s and 50s. The understanding between the two religious communities, who used to live side by side, has slowly been forgotten. Nina Robinson asks what the future will be for the co-existence of Muslim and

Jewish communities in this unique Muslim country? (BBC)
