The Real Story The Communist Party of China agreed to amend the constitution be amended to allow President Xi Jinping to serve longer than the currently mandated two terms. The move would sweep aside a system of power-sharing that's been in place for decades and the 64 year-old could now be China's president for life. Carrie Gracie and a panel of expert guests discuss what's behind the decision, and whether it's a legitimate attempt to safeguard and bolster Xi's campaign against corruption and ensure essential economic reforms, or a big step towards authoritarian leadership (BBC)
